Harold S. Resnick

Dr. Harold S. Resnick is recognized internationally as a leading authority in organizational transformation, performance management and leadership development. He has consulted with hundreds of private and public sector clients in North and South America, Europe and the Middle East.

In 1980 Dr. Resnick founded Work Systems Associates, Inc. (WSA), a management and organizational development consulting firm. He served as its CEO until 1998. Under his leadership, WSA grew to become a multi-national firm serving such clients as CH2MHILL, EMC, Novell, IKON, Raytheon, ABB Lummus, Volvo GM Heavy Truck, Philips Electronics USA, Lockheed Martin, and Shell Oil.

In 1996 Dr. Resnick founded Generation21 Learning Systems, one of the seminal web-based training and knowledge management platforms. It was the technology of choice by NASA, Dell Computer, Agilent Technologies, and Verizon. Generation21 was acquired by Renaissance Learning, Inc. (Nasdaq RLRN) in July, 1999.

Dr. Resnick received Master's and Doctoral degrees from Wayne State University. He was a university professor at Boston University, Temple University and Wayne State University. As a corporate executive he was the Director of Organizational Development for Raytheon Data Systems, supporting 5,000 individuals in 147 locations around the world.

Dr. Resnick and his wife Barbara reside in Ponte Vedra Beach, Florida where he maintains a private consulting practice serving clients in performance management, organizational change, leadership development, strategic planning, and executive team development. Previously published articles are archived on his website, www.worksystems.com.
